

Company History:

In 1995, Mitchel Walker started Walker Consulting & Design Group. The company's primary focus was water conservation through proper irrigation system design, installation, maintenance and management. The company became Masuen Consulting, a general partnership, in 1997 after merging with 'By Design' a horticultural consulting and design firm owned by Michele Masuen. As a result of the merger, the company expanded its services to include horticultural consulting, permit plan review, ground water modeling, and consumptive water use permitting. In 2004 Masuen Consulting changed to its current name of Masuen Consulting LLC, a limited liability partnership, and added its first two full time employees. As part of the company's long term growth strategy, Todd Mohler and Aaron Smith joined the Masuen Consulting team as principles in 2006. As a result of their unique and special skills, the company added GPS as-built services, GPS mapping, GIS, DOT project specialization, Green Building (L.E.E.D.) certification, Landscape Architecture, and Site Planning to the company's ever growing list of services. Today, Masuen Consulting LLC is one of a handful of companies in the United States focused on providing water conservation solutions to governmental entities, the development community, and others interested in conserving our most precious resource. The company's philosophical cornerstones of water conservation, long-term value, and un-equaed customer service have enabled Masuen Consulting to become one of the most respected water conservation oriented consulting firms in the United States. This philosophy is undoubtedly the foundation upon which Masuen Consulting LLC has been able to expand its operations throughout the United States and Caribbean.
